ROUTINE MATTERS BEFORE COUNCIL

At the regular meeting of the City Council held last Monday evening a communication was received from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company requesting permission to cut a 2x3 foot hole in the paving near the east curb of Crocker avenue, and 10 feet south of Mission street, for the purpose of repairing a leak in the gas main, the request being accompanied by a sketch of the proposed work. Permission was granted, the work to be under the supervision of the superintendent of streets.

Permission was asked by the telephone company to open Theta and Santa Barbra avenues for the purpose of placing conduit, and to place two anchors on Theta avenue, as shown on attached sketch. Permission was granted, the work to be under the supervision of the superintendent of streets.

Monthly bills were read and ordered paid, and the monthly report of the poundmaster was read and ordered filed.

Dr. Callsen reported a hog ranch in the Colma district, and that a definite report had been promised by the owner by the first of the month as to when he will be able to move.

AMERICAN LEGION DANCE A SUCCESS

The social dance given by Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, on Friday evening, September 25, proved an enjoyable occasion, and "Doc" and his gang were kept more than busy.

In announcing the result of the election of officers for the coming year, we failed to mention that Comrades Prziborowski and Crane were elected to represent the local Post in the County Council.

A number of Post and Unit members spent a pleasant evening attending the presentation of colors to Samuel Gompers Post, at Memorial Hall, in the Civic Center, San Francisco. Many notables were present, and as this is a labor union Post, their ceremonies were particularly impressive.

Several of the boys also attended the installation ceremonies of the South San Francisco Post on Wednesday evening. San Mateo Forty and Eight did the honors in a most creditable manner.

On Tuesday evening members of the Post and Unit witnessed the installation at Golden Gate Post. Incidentally the Unit had the largest ladies' representation present.

ASSOCIATED AERIES MEET IN SOUTH CITY

The Associated Aeries of San Mateo county met at South San Francsco on Tuesday evening and a large gathering of county Eagles was on hand.

Redwood City Aerie captured the honors for attendance, having 58 more than Daly City.

An elaborate program of entertainment was furnished by Brother Biebel of Daly City Aerie, featuring five snappy wrestling matches, which kept the crowd on their toes all the time and gave them something to talk about.

A musical program was furnished by South San Francisco Aerie's haywire orchestra. The evening's entertainment was followed by a banquet, which seemed to be thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

MRS. DRURY ENTERTAINS LA FIESTA CLUB MEMBERS

Thursday evening of last week the members of La Fiesta Club had a very enjoyable time at the home of Mrs. Annette Drury, of Brunswick street. All the young laides extended their best wishes of Mrs. Drury and her infant twins, William and Annette. After the regular business meeting the members adjourned to the dining room, where a delicious supper was enjoyed. Mrs. Drury was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Mrs. McGuirk. Those enjoying Mrs. Drury's hospitality were: Mesdames Sylvia Fischer, Christine Hume, Lorraine Wall, Julia Romer and Mrs. McGuirk; Misses Tessie O'Connor, Collista Dalton, Eleanor Boyle, Marge O'Connor, Louise Clemens, Elsie Fahey, Edna Boyle, and Audrey Diamond.

'RALLY DAY' IN GRACE CHURCH

Sunday morning at 10, the Presbyterian church will hold Rally Day for the benefit of the Sunday school. This day usually signifies the beginning of the Fall program. This program will be followed by the regular morning church service at 11. Evening service is observed at 7:45. Strangers in the community are especially invited to attend this church.

SATURDAY NIGHT BOY SCOUT NIGHT

Next Saturday, October 3, at 8:00 P. M., an entertainment and dance will be sponsored by fraternal, social and commercial organizations of Daly City in behalf of the Boy Scouts and Cubs of Daly City.

We all know that it requires money to keep any organization going, and the Boy Scouts are no exception. The money received from this entertainment will go toward the purchase of equipment such as needed in the meeting place and on the camping trip. All should know that 90 per cent of what is invested in the youth of today is returned three fold in the future. So let's all get together and work hard for the success of this entertainment. Remember, this is "for your boy."

The entertainment will start at 8 P. M., and continue until 9 P. M. There will be, insofar as we can learn, a bevy of beautiful girls, and other entertaining features. The entertainment committee states that never before has such a show been provided for Daly City. The union music will be under the direction of Ed Hymes, and they sure can play "some mean music."

Well, here goes! Daly City over the top once more! Let's go, Saturday night, October 3, to the Daly City Auditorium. Admission is 50 cents per couple.

SERIES OF SERMONS AT METHODIST CHURCH

Has Christ a message for the men of today? What would He say to the hungry, jobless, discouraged men walking the streets day and night?

"What Christ Has to Offen an Individual Living in Our Present World" is the subject of a series of sermons to be preached in the Methodist Community church. The first one in the series will be given next Sunday, entitled "The Church Man."

The challenging Christ offers to the church man something finer and more intimate than that which He offers to any other. This has been the cause of not a few persons altering their whole outlook on life. "Many a critic of the modern church, who himself has not gone to church for twenty years, would be amazed, not only at what is being said from many a present-day pulpit, but at the response which does not end in appreciative words but passes on into appropriate experiments," said E. F. Tittle, a distinguished writer, recently.

The topics to be considered during the month of October at the Methodist church will be: October 4, "The Church Man." The Challenge of Jesus. October 11, "The Rich Man." The poor rich and the rich poor. October 18, "The Pagan." The one way road. October 25, "The Unemployed Man." The resources of God.

BUNDLE DRIVE PLANNED BY HIGH SCHOOL P. T. A.

Have you articles of clothing, shoes or hats, around your home that have been outgrown by Johnnie or Mary? The student aid department of the Jefferson High P. T. A. will have a bundle drive from now until October 9. The clothing must be clean, but will be repaired at the main shop before they are put on sale. The prices asked for these articles, such as shoes, hats and clothing of all kinds, are very small, and the money will be put into the District Student Aid fund to assist needy students in the schools of San Mateo county.

Miss Effie Potter, is Student Aid chairman, and you should bring or send your bundles to her before Friday, October 9. This is a very worthy cause, so do your bit.

EAGLES BALL TEAM AGAIN VICTORIOUS

The crowd that attended last Sunday's baseball game at Ocean View between the Daly City Eagles and the Golden Gate Skate Club was treated to a real thriller. The Daly City boys came out victors, 11 to 10, after overcoming a 10 to 0 score.

The game started out with no scoring for two innings. Then the Skate Club scored a run in each of the third, fourth and fifth innings, and in the sixth inning, by the means of three hits and a brace of errors, scored six more runs. At this stage of the battle the female rooting section of the Skate team was in high spirits. But Pfeifer, score-keeper for the Eagles, and a young lady keeping score for the Skate team had different scores. Steve had 9 to 0, and the Miss had 10 to 0. The Eagles accepted the 10 to 0 score as they came to bat in the last of the sixth, and scored four runs, two more in the seventh, and then in the last of the ninth, with the score 10 to 6 against them, the home boys scored five runs to cinch the game. Such hitting as the Daly City boys put on in the last inning sure shows that they have the fighting spirit.

Gus Ford pitched a nice game and led the hitting attack with four hits. Sye, who opposed Ford, pitched great ball for five innings, after which he was hit hard.

This coming Sunday the Eagles will again play on Ocean View diamond. Watch the bush baseball column of the San Francisco Chronicle on Saturday.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS TO HAVE WEINIE ROAST

The young people of Grace Presbyterian church will have a weinie roast at the Beach on Saturday evening, October 10, for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor. The young people of the community are heartily invited to attend the meetings specially for young people at 6:45 P. M. Sunday evenings.

GETTING SET FOR TANFORAN MEET

Members of the Pacific Coast Breeders Association are preparing to have their best thoroughbreds under colors at the coming meet at Tanforan. Native Sons and Native Daughters of the horse realm will compete in the races here against fleet ones reared in Kentucky and Maryland. Rivalry between East and West will be keen, but as in other periods of racing, of sportsmanlike character.

Walter Dupee has sent up some two year olds that promise to make trouble for the "invaders." Taches has won high praise from discriminating critics by her sparking performances at Agua Caliente. This one has five brackets to her credit in a comparatively short period of racing.

Memories of many a stirring battle on the polo field come up when it is recalled that Taches is not only owned by Walter Dupee, long a prominent figure in Western polo, but was bred by that other poloist, Carleton F. Burke. Both have held membership in the Pacific Coast Breeders Association since its organization, and have been active in promoting its success. Taches is by the well known Trompe La Mort which was brought out here some years ago when Burke was establishing his thoroughbred nursery.

C. W. ("Bill") Carroll, who trained Runstar for his victories at Tanforan eight years ago, was a heavy buyer at the recent yearling sales at Saratoga. "Bill" has fourteen of the youngsters in training at Pleasanton, and may be expected to make a strong showing at the next spring meet at Tanforan. The colts and fillies are by such successful stallions as Hourless, Campfire, Chatterton and Waygood. Chatterton will be remembered as the chief competitor of Runstar at Tanforan. Waygood is an imported horse, but son of the American bred Tracery.

Much interest attaches to the promised shipment to Tanforan from Del Monte of two English stallions by Henry P. Russell. The horses are progressing well in their training gallops and should be fit shortly after the opening on November 6.

E. T. Perry, of Menlo Park, one of he first to sign the membership roll of the Pacific Coast Breeders Association, has acquired several youngsters from Major Sven Christenson and will have his colors up at Tanforan.

EAGLES' HORSESHOE TEAM AGAIN VICTORS

Last Sunday morning the Eagles' horseshoe team won as usual. The high scores were made by Julius Nelson and Steve Pfeifer.

The South San Francisco Aerie horseshoe team has accepted Brother Rodenberger's challenge, and will be on deck October 18, at 10 o'clock, at the Daly City Park. Redwood City has issued a challenge to the winner, and invites the Daly City team to go to Redwood City and play.

Next Sunday will be open to all players, and a large crowd is expected. So, if you are a horseshoe player, come and get in the game.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

On Friday, September 18, Captain John Dunn and his 100 pound speedball team from Crocker met Woodrow Wilson's 100 pound A team, captained by Tom Bergin. Woodrow Wilson took the laurels this time with a score of 9 to 1.

A game which was a battle from the start was played on Woodrow Wilson's grounds Wednesday, September 23, between Jefferson 100 B team and Woodrow Wilson's 100 A team. The final result was in favor of Jefferson with a score of 9 to 6.

Alfred, Almerico and Augustien of Jefferson each kicked one goal, while those of Woodrow Wilson with goals to their credit were Norman Wiley and Tony De Maria.

Crocker's unlimited was beaten by Colma's B team on Friday, September 25, by a score of 7 to 2.

Crocker won her first game of the season from the Woodrow Wilson 100 pound team, 3 to 0.

Mr. Mathews has arranged the teams according to weight, and in this way has given every boy a chance to participate. Whether the boy stays in his team or not, depends upon his scholarship and discipline.

Mr. Waters, the band-master, has been working diligently for weeks and has now the members of Jefferson district working together once a week in a well organized band. The parents should realize this is a wonderful opportunity for the children.

NEW TRIAL DENIED IN THE FLOOD CASE

The motion of the attorneys for Constance May Gavin for a new trial of her suit for a daughter's share of the James L. Flood fortune was denied at Redwood City last Wednesday by Superior Judge George H. Buck.

Judge Buck, in his decision, which was quite a lengthy document, stated that not only had Mrs. Gavin failed to establish her contention, but that "in my opinion there is not the slightest resemblance between her and and James L. Flood."

In handing down his decision, Judge Buck said it would have been "easier to deny the motion without expressing any views. But in view of the prominence of the attorneys and the issue," he declared, "I thought it best to explain my attitude."

Judge Buck denied the charges by Mrs. Gavin's attorneys that he was prejudiced in favor of the Floods and that he discriminated against Mrs. Gavin. "I never knew any of the Floods, nor have I ever spoken to them," he said.

Mrs. Gavin's only redress now lies with the Supreme Court, her attorneys, John Taaffe and Maxwell McNutt, said.

OLD GLORY POST NOTES

The members of Old Glory Post, No. 2044, held their nominations for officers last meeting. At the next meeting, October 9, nominations will be re-opened and election held the same evening. It is expected that this will be a big event, so come on, you doughboys, gobs and marines; turn out 100 per cent. Your Post wants your support.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will hold their nominations and election of officers, October 9. All members are requested to be present.

The Post has completed arrangements for their big benefit whist to be given Friday evening, October 23, at Masonic Hall. This affair is for a worthy cause and all members will be expected to give their wholehearted assistance to the committee in charge, who are working hard to put it over with a bang.

Captain Dave Refatti reports his degree team still up and coming. It won't be long now until the boys will have their uniforms, and all are anxious to see them in full dress.

All members of the Ladies' Auxiliary who possibly can go are invited to join a party of ladies to visit San Francisco Auxiliary, No. 58, San Francisco, this Friday evening, October 2, at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Jean O'Rourk, of Evergreen avenue, entertained a group of her friends on Thursday of last week at 12 o'clock at a luncheon and garden party. The guests included Mrs. M. Friman, Mrs. G. R. Augustien, Mrs. D. Campbell, Mrs. M. Haywood, Mrs. Richard Plath, Mrs. Edward Trier, Mrs. Stacey Meade, Mrs. Gertrude Gehringer, and Mrs. O. Schramm.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Jefferson High may have an Annual this year—at least the Senior class is given permission to show whether or not it can raise the necessary funds. A committee headed by Albert Boynton appealed strongly to the Board of Education and presented a plan whereby the Senior class believes it can put over the project. It will cost in the neighborhood of $800. The plan is to raise the money largely by entertainments and drives of one kind or another as occasion suggests. The committee agreed to have on hand $500 before Christmas, with the further stipulation that no contracts are to be entered into until this amount is raised. It was the thought of the board and the principal that at this time every economy should be exercised, and that the raising of money for an annual would work a hardship. But the enthusiasm of the committee won the necessary permission from the board to proceed with plans for the annual. Here's wishing the Senior class every success.

A plan for the management of student body dances at the Jefferson Union high school was submitted to the Board of Education last Tuesday evening by a committee of students, and was favorably received. The plan provides that, hereafter, the student who invites a guest to any dance given under the auspices of the school is to be responsible for the actions of the guest. And the students, under a plan of self-government, have pledged themselves to see that the dances shall be conducted in a manner beyond criticism. Even the form and style of dancing are to come within the restrictions set by the committee.

It was pointed out by the Board of Education and Principal Ferguson that the actions of the students themselves had not brought any criticism upon the school, but that the outsiders had subjected the school dances to criticism. Trustee Gehringer expressed a very emphatic disapproval of the actions of such guests, and said he was glad to withdraw his former objection in the light of the serious effort being made by the students to formulate a plan to keep the school dances free from objectionable features. He warned them, however, that if they were not able to put their plan into effect and carry it through, he would insist upon outsiders being eliminated from the dances. This, too, was the general sentiment of the board and the principal. The committee that appeared for the students consisted of Paul Green, Raymond Torres, Nathalie Bogart, Geneva Lucas, Albert Boynton, Myrtle Dougherty, Leo Flanagan and Martha Nelson.

On Saturday, October 3, Jefferson High is to be host to the C. S. F. Chapters of the Bay region and peninsula. The program will begin at 9:30 in the morning with registration of the delegates. Rose Merlo, president of the Jefferson Chapter, will deliver the address of welcome. During the morning session Principal James Ferguson will speak on "Citizenship and the C. S. F." At the luncheon, Miss Pansy Abbott, superintendent of schools of San Mateo county, will speak to the delegates on "What About Tomorrow?"

There will be a round table discussion on matters of general interest to the C. S. F., participated in by Miss Staib, Rose Merlo, Marion Hackley, Frances Franzen, Albert Boynton and Marshall Gattey.

At 2:30 the Glee Club, under the leadership of Miss Burfield, will present an operetta. A piano solo will be rendered by Alois Lang, and the dramatics class will present a short skit, "Breakfast for Two." Paul Green, Marshall Gattey, Alois Lang and Albert Boynton will sing a quartet, to be followed by a dance by Alecia Fields.

BAY SHORE DOINGS

The Bay Shore School P. T. A. will celebrate Father's Night on their second birthday, October 8, at 8 P. M., at the fire hall on Walbridge street. A large program has been arranged. The program will start at 8 o'clock with a short business meeting, followed by a talk on life membership by Mrs. R. J. Spaan, president of the Seventeenth district. Soprano solo, by Mrs. Earl Melior. Highland Fling, by Melva Harrison. Reading, by Mr. R. C. Stahl. Piano Solo. Trick Dog. Scotch Comedan, through the courtesy of the Market Street Railway Entertainers. Reading by Mrs. R. C. Stahl. Accordionist, Eddie Bosio. Baritone Solo, solo, Mr. Arvid Johnson, accompanied by Miss Olga Johnson. Following the program, luncheon will be served by Mrs. Jack Wentworth, hospitality chairman, and her staff.

DETAILED POPULATION STATISTICS FOR STATE

Statistics for the 1930 population of California classified as urban and rural, and by sex, color, age, marital condition, illiteracy, etc., have been issued by the Bureau of Census in a bulletin (Population—Second Series) entitled, "Composition and Characteristics of the Population." This is a pamphlet of 59 pages, 9 by 11 inches, consisting mainly of statistical tables.

The urban population of California in 1930 was 4,160,596, forming 73.3 per cent of the total population. Urban population, as defined by the Census Bureau, is in general that residing in cities and other incorporated places, having 2,500 inhabitants or more, the remainder being classified as rural. For use in connection with the 1930 census, however, the definition of urban territory has been slightly modified and extended so as to include townships and other political subdivisions (not incorporated as municipalities, nor containing any area so incorporated) which have a total population of 10,000 or more, and a population density of 1,000 or more per square mile. This extension added to the urban group in California two townships having an aggregate population of 48,992, which would have been 72.4 per cent, instead of 73.3 per sent, the difference representing the effect of the special rule adding the two townships to the urban area.

The rural population of California, as established for 1930, excluding the two townships affected by the special rule, was 1,516,655, comprising 579,350 persons living on farms, and 937,305 not living on farms, representing as a whole a nominal increase of 38.5 per cent. Under the 1920 rule, the rural population of the state in 1930 would have been 1,565,647, which would represent an increase of 43.0 per cent, as compared with the rural population in 1929, (1,095,132.)

Of the entire population of California, 88.8 per cent are white, 74.5 per cent being native white, and 14.3 per cent foreign-born white. More than one-half of the native white population are of native parentage. Of the foreign-born white poulation, 53.9 per cent have been naturalized.

The population of Califorina as a whole increased 2,250,390, or 65.7 per cent, between 1920 and 1930. The number of persons under one year of age increased 22,399, or 41.5 per cent, while the entire group of children under 5 years of age showed a gain of 129,640, or 47.0 per cent.

The proportion of the population 7 to 13 years of age attending school increased from 93.7 per cent in 1920 to 97.6 per cent in 1930, and of those 16 and 17 years of age, the proportion increased from 54.7 per cent in 1920 to 82.1 per cent in 1930. The percentage of illiteracy in the population 10 years of age and over decreased from 4.3 to 2.6.

There were 2,500,969 gainful workers in the state in 1930, of whom 1,942,155 were males, representing 66 per cent of the male population, and 558,814 were females, representing 20.4 per cent of the female population. Including both farm owners and farm laborers, agriculture employed 334,241 persons; 14,203 were engaged in foretry and fishing; and 55,623 in the extraction of minerals. The various manufacturing and mechanical industries employed 618,023, the largest numbers being in the building industry, in iron and steel industries, in food and allied industries, and in chemical and allied industries. There were 246,616 persons engaged in transportation; 535,061 in trade, including banking and insurance; 79,039 in public service (not elsewhere classified); 251,854 in professional service; and 289,787 in domestic and personal service.

HIGHWAY PATROL WOULD CURB DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Aiming another blow at drunken drivers, E. Raymond Cato, Chief of the California Highway Patrol, recently issued an order to all traffic officers that hereafter district attorneys or their representatives be notified immediately when persons charged with driving while intoxicated were arrested.

The order is intended to apply to cases involving injury or death where "the odor of alcoholic liquor is detected on the breath of either driver or if the officer has reason to believe the driver of either vehicle has been drinking."

In such cases officers are instructed to take the accused to a doctor at once for examination and to notify the district attorney of the county in which the offense occurred.

This procedure, it was explained, will enable the district attorney and his representatives to obtain firsthand knowledge of the facts and will result in a speeding up of the issuance of complaints.

In explanation of the order, Chief Cato declared he regards the drunken driver as the greatest menace on the highways, and that no effort will be spared to rid the roads of this type of offender.

Records of the patrol show the war conducted against the drunken driver has resulted thus far this year in the cancellation of license of 548 drivers. This is more than 44 per cent of the total cancelled for all offenses.

NEW AUTO LICENSE PLATES WILL ADVERTISE CALIFORNIA

When the Californian goes traveling next year in his motor car, there will be no mistake about where he comes from, for the name of his home state will be spelled out in big letters across the bottom of his license plate.

Plates for this and some previous years bear the abbreviation "Calif." or "Cal." But after conferences with Daniel J. O'Brien, director of motor vehicles, Russell Bevans, registrar of vehicles, Rolland A. Vendegrift, director of finance, and others, it was decided to spell the word California out because of its advertising vale.

The numerals 19 will appear in the lower left hand corner and 32 in the lower right. The word California will appear between them.

Plates for 1932 will be 13⅞ inches long and 6⅛ inches wide, the same as this year, and will be made of 24-gauge steel to give them strength.

Script letters will be used 3¾ inches high and 1½ inches wide. An inverted bead will run around the edge.

The new plates will have a dull orange background and letters and numerals will be black. These are the same colors as this year except that they are reversed. Repeated tests have demonstrated that this combination of colors offers the greatest degree of visibility and thereby lessens the chance for "hit and run" drivers to escape.

The manufacturer is now working on the plates and is delivering some of them to the Division at this time. Approxiamtely 2,205,650 pairs constitute the initial order.

LOCAL P. T. A. CARD PARTY PROVES DECIDED SUCCESS

Mrs. M. Boyle, president of the General Pershing Parent-Teachers' Association, wishes to thank each and every one individually for their wonderful co-operation in helping to make the whist party the financial and social success it proved to be. The money taken in was beyond expectations, and will go to furthering the work that the Association has undertaken for the coming year. To Mrs. Steele the members are deeply grateful, as it was largely through her efforts that the afternoon proved so successful.

Mrs. Boyle extends a special invitation to all the mothers of the community to attend the next meeting, which will be held at the school on October 6, at 2:30 P. M.

Mrs. Franzen, safety chairman of the Seventeenth district, will give a talk on safety. The second speaker for the afternoon will be Mrs. Baugh, financial secretary of the Seventeenth district. Both women have been interested in Parent-Teachers' work for many years, and a pleasant afternoon is expected by all.

BACIGALUPI'S STATEMENT REGARDING TRANSAMERICA

The following statement has been issued by James A. Bacigalupi, President, Transamerica Corporation:

"Some of our stockholders have misconstrued the statements contained in the letter of September 22, addressed to the stockholders of Transamerica Corporation, respecting the corporation's intention 'when conditions are favorable' to dispose of the majority interest in the California banks.

"It was distinctly stated that such disposition of the banks is to be made 'in a manner which will be advantageous to both the interests of Transamerica stockholders and to the banks themselves.'

"There is no design of taking the Bank of America N. T. & S. A. of California away from the stockholders by selling it to outside interests. One of the underlying principles of the new plan is to return the banks now controlled to LOCAL ownership. It is intended, therefore, that the Bank of America of California shall remain a California institution, controlled by Californians. This being so, it is unreasonable and unjust to anticipate that a disposition of the Bank of America of California will be made or attempted until it will be possible for the stockholders to acquire it. The disposition of the shares of the bank may take the form of a distribution by way of a dividend of shares or rights to subscribe, or of a direct sale of part of the shares, or partly in one way and partly in another. Exact determination of the method to be employed must wait upon official action which remains yet to be taken. The only element of the plan as yet defined is that it must be fair to the stockholders of Transamerica Corporation.

"An expresison of our intention to dispose of the banks was deemed advisable at this time, notwithstanding that the terms and conditions of the offer have not yet been formulated.

"I think that the present management of Transamerica Corporation is entitled to the presumption that it will not support any plan designed to take the Bank of America of California away from the stockholders of Transamerica Corporation.

"Incidentally, I may add that if outside moneyed interest were intent on taking the Bank of America of California away from the preesnt holders of Transamerica stock, it is manifest that they could accomplish it more easily by buying Transamerica stock at the present prices. In other words any danger that exists that ontside interests may acquire these banks comes not from any acts of the management but from the willingness of timid shareholders to throw away their stock at present prices."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

E. P. Chase, editor and publisher of the Atlantic City (Iowa) News-Telegraph, says:

"If Herbert Hoover, now President of the United States, and the recipient of much criticism on the part of various groups because he has been unable to work any magic for them—if he were not president and were living at his home in Palo Alto, California, the American people would be clamoring for him to fill the executive office as a doctor for their economic ills. There is no question but that would be the situation were Mr. Hoover at the present time in private life with the Nation in the midst of a depression like the one we are passing through.

"The American people are peculiar. They either heroize a man beyond all reason or criticize him beyond all reason. A super-man myth has been built up around Mr. Hoover in accordance with the usual American custom, because he has been known as a most successful executive and a most successful dispenser of welfare, but at best he is but human, like the rest of us, and has his human limitations. He knows of no magical way to make money where there is no profit; nor does he know of any way to set at naught the basic laws and fundamental principles of economics.

"The American people either over press agent their heroes or else criticize them when they find they can not do the impossible. But, I repeat that if Mr. Hoover were living in private life and the problems confronted the nation that confront us today, the American people would clamor for his leadership. Such is our inconsistency."

LEGION'S PROGRAM OF MAJOR ACTIVITIES

Facing conditions which never previously existed, the California Department of the American Legion has started, under the leadership of State Commander Van Hogan, a program of major activities which through the energetic functioning of every Legionnaire in the state will alleviate distress among veterans and give added protection to American citizens. The program to be furthered by the Legion will be of state and nation-wide scope. It will embrace employment, child welfare, rehabilitation of veterans, Americanism, conservation of life and property, immigration, prohibition and lawlessness.

Employment of veterans will be given first consideration in this far-reaching program. The state and national governments are to immediately initiate vigorous activity on all public works for which funds have already been allocated and to appropriate further funds for construction of essential character. A thirty million dollar bond issue is to be proposed to Governor Rolph for building homes under the Veterans Welfare Act, and President Hoover is to be petitioned to call a conference of Governors for the purpose of extending to other states the California Home and Farm Purchase Plan, which has proved so successful.

The rehabilitation program will include the adoption of the Welch bill removing technicalities relating to war insurance cases; amendments to the World War Veterans' Act; providing for the extension of term insurance for from five to ten years; allowing regional managers of U. S. Veterans Bureaus to make contracts for the care of women veterans; increasing the number of hospital beds in government hospitals in this state; making veterans' hospitals in California eligible to accommodate colored male beneficiaries; providing for a home for women veterans; adjudication of insurance death claims by regional veteran officers and disability retirement allowances for army nurses.

Efforts will be made to eradicate illiteracy in California during the next five years and exclude all aliens ineligible to American citizenship.

ARTICHOKE CROP IMPORTANT ONE

More than 825 carloads of Globe artichokes were shipped out of California in 1930-1931, it was revealed at a state-wide meeting of factors in the industry, held September 19, at Giannini Hall, Berkeley, under the auspices of the College of Agriculture of the University of California.

In addition, California markets used 513 carloads, according to Dr. E. A. Stokdyk, associate professor of agricultural economics at the University of California, who addressed the meeting and outlined recommendations for improving the marketing facilities for the distribution of this crop.

With New York City, Chicago, Boston, New Orleans, Philadelphia and Buffalo leading in the consumption of California artichokes, the number of cities to which distribution was made totalled 120, part of the crop being shipped in carloads designated as "mixed vegetables." This method of distribution, stated Stokdyk, has been important in introducing the product in several areas, and can and should be stimulated.

"The canning of artichokes," said Professor Stokdyk, "has also become an important phase of the industry, the pack in 1930-1931 amounting to 55,000 cases. It has been the experience of canners that the canned product, once introduced in a market, sells rapidly. It is probable that the canned product can be used successfully to introduce the artichoke in those sections that are not acquainted with it."

Did Pharaoh give them corn or Wheat ?

WHAT GRAIN saved the starving Egyptians? Original translations say, "Pharaoh gave them corn". But many authorities now believe it was actually wheat. For wheat has been found in the tombs of the Pharaohs.

And wheat is still the "staff of life" today. California mills alone use 10 million bushels yearly; produce two million barrels of flour.

Statewide in production and distribution, the grain industry uses Bank of America's unique facilities from ranch to retail store.

Funds advanced by this Bank assist growers to finance their yearly crops.

To milling companies, Bank of America extends seasonal credit, under prudent safeguards — as an aid to economical distribution.

Assisting to finance domestic and export shipments, the Bank makes collections; transfers funds to and from the markets of the world.

The cycle from ranch to retailer is completed by Bank of America's service to 600 baking companies and 4,000 grocers throughout the state. . . . A nearby branch brings the same modern banking facilities almost to your door.

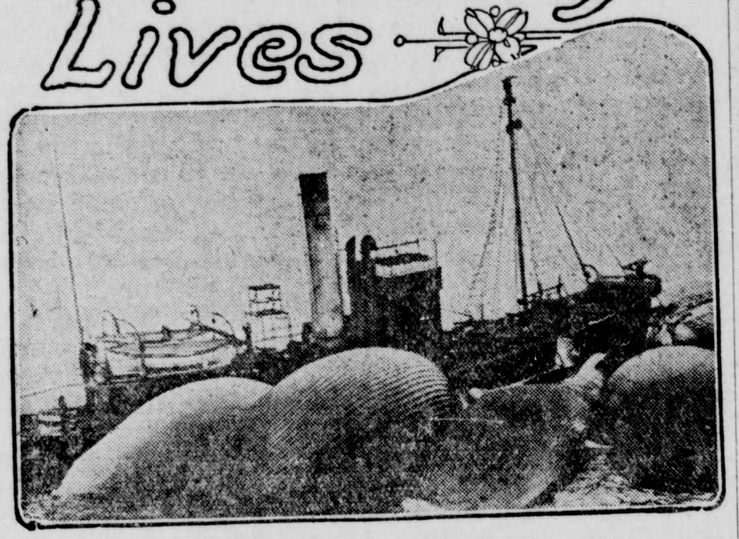
How Norway Lives



Inflated Moby Dicks in Tow.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

WHY did Norway make a counter claim with Denmark over a segment of the east coast of Greenland, a land once inhabited by Eskimos but now barren and ice choked most of the year? Perhaps the Norwegians seek to extend their fisheries, for a large part of Norway's population lives on the generosity of King Neptune.

Only a little more than 3 per cent of Norway is under cultivation. The country lacks the chief prerequisite of modern industrialism—the juxtaposition of iron and coal. The Norwegians, striving to the utmost, cannot eke out a living from the soil. They import much food. Nor can they depend, as does England, upon the exchange of the products of their factories for the products of other people's farms.

Even the skies frown often upon Norway. The west coast for a good part of the year is shrouded by a pall of mist, fog and drizzle, with 200 days of rain out of the year. The annual rainfall at Bergen is more than six feet. The country is traversed by a great dorsal plateau standing stark and high above sea level. In these rocky, sterile soils, useful plant life will not take root. A great wall of mountains known as the Keel defines the Swedish frontier.

Southernmost Norway is in the same latitude as northern Labrador, with northernmost Norway lying far within the Arctic circle. Norway is hardly more than a fringe, or shelf, washed by the Arctic and the North Atlantic oceans and deeply indented by salt water inland canals, known as fjords. For the most part, agriculture is limited to nooks and corners. Little farms cling to the base of mountains like shipwrecked sailors to a life raft. Sixty per cent of Norway's farms are less than five acres; 98 per cent are less than 25 acres.

Norway seems to be one of nature's climatic mistakes. Too much daylight in summer, too little in winter; too much worthless water here, too much sterile mountain there. But what the country may lack in quality is more than offset by the quality of the people who inhabit it. Norwegians are happier than the common run of mortals. They are essentially open-air country people, knowing nothing of the misery and abject poverty of city slums and tenements. They have learned to live comfortably with themselves, having a wealth of inner resources on which to draw. They go down to the sea in ships and see the earth and the fullness thereof. Before them lies the panorama of mountains, glaciers, cloud racks floating through the lofty defiles of their fjords.

They know the world, too, from the inside of books. They are a bookish people, prizing education. Illiterates are about as plentiful in Norway as horned toads on Boston common. When it comes to exchange of intelligence, Norway has more telephones than Spain or Poland, with populations from seven to ten times as great.

Its Face and Character.

Each country, like each human being on this planet, has a face and character of its own. Chile, another elongated mountainous coast country fronting the western sea, in a considerable area of its homeland is parched and rainless, while Norway is drenched with moisture. Greece and Italy suffer from too much sun, while Norway hasn't enough to go around. Greece, Albania, Portugal, Esthonia, and Norway are the only European countries which grow no sugar beets—too much sun in the Mediterranean countries, too little in Norway. Contrast the loiterers basking in the winter's sunshine on the steps of the Piazza di Spagna, Rome, with the Norwegians clad in furs and oilskins adventuring over cold, gray, fog-covered waters. Italy and Norway from early antiquity bred a race of sea-rovers, adventurers, discoverers.

Norway and Greece, looking seaward, present the appearance of once compact lands that have been shot to pieces by titanic subterranean explosions. Their deeply indented coasts are fringed and tasseled with island groups. The sea is sown thick with fragments like celestial star dust in the Milky Way. The islands of Greece furnish goats, currants, and material for poetic rhapsodizing.

The Norwegian coast is an exaggerated southern Alaskan coast. Skippers navigate big ships through Norwegian fjords just as they do through the deep-cut Alaskan inner canals. The fjords, whether the result of glacial erosion or faulting of the earth's crust, are of awsome beauty and of considerable human utility.

Saved by Gulf Stream.

The warm Atlantic drift from the Gulf stream supplies Norway with both climate and fish. But for this beneficence of nature, Norway would be a bleak and inhospitable waste and most of the Norwegians would be compelled to emigrate or starve.

Fish, following family tradition, crowd into the shoal waters of the North sea to feed and breed. They've been doing it for thousands of years, and they'll probably keep on just so long as this poor earth's pale history runs. They return like the swallows in the spring.

Roughly speaking Norway has three strings to its fishing bow: cod, whale and herring; but the herring is king. Herring, because of their abundance, give rise to the greatest of the world's fisheries. They are as gregarious as the starlings which cluster by night in the tops of trees on Pennsylvania avenue, Washington. They run in immense schools, with some of their life cycle still shrouded in obscurity, although it is probably as well known as that of any other important fish.

Norwegian herring fisheries were famous before William the Conqueror. The Norwegian fish catch runs to about one and three-quarter billion pounds, of which approximately one billion pounds are contributed by the herring tribe. The live herring is something of a traveler, but the dead herring goes farther. What one may call a "pickled-herring-raw-cucumber-sour-cream belt" includes a better part of eastern Germany, Poland, the three Baltic states, Finland and Russia.

The Norwegian cod, unlike the herring, travels southward rather than eastward. Cured codfish enjoys the entree to all classes of society in southern Europe, particularly in the Catholic countries where meatless days are prescribed. Some years ago, when Norway was trying out prohibition, a serious effort was made to exclude the importation of the more heady Spanish and Portuguese wines. The Iberians naturally resented the affront to their delicious wines and threatened reprisals upon the Norwegian codfish. The anti-codfish campaign was too much for the Norwegians. They capitulated by throwing open their doors to Mediterranean wines.

Development of Fisheries.

Norwegian fisheries have developed from small beginnings, when little wooden boats put out a mile or two from the shore scrabbling for a meager catch of herring. Now great steel power boats make catches of 10,000 barrels of fish in a day. Once estimated by the pound, the catch is now estimated by the ton.

Norway has come largely to control the world's whaling industry, once a great American business, with Yankee ships sailing from New England ports. About the turn of the century it looked as if the whaling business the world over was doomed to early extinction. Defenseless monsters, the poor whales do not get an even break! Nature ironically dooms them by causing them to signal their own destruction. If whales were equipped to remain beneath the surface even as long as the modern submarine, they would be more than a match for the energetic Norwegians, with their big steel ships and long-range harpoon guns.

Norway's annual production of whale oil rose from 19,000,000 pounds in 1906 to 311,000,000 pounds in 1927. The Norwegian annual herring catch would load a solid train of steel gondola cars reaching from New York to Philadelphia, or, if converted to Norwegian cars, a solid train 300 miles long. It would require at least double these train lengths to handle the annual catch of whales.

The Norwegians are the northernmost and the southernmost workers of the world. Their operations cover a wider range than the flight of the Arctic tern. Annually 10,000 Norwegians work in Antarctic seas close up to the great ice barrier. Just as many work in the Arctic seas on the outskirts of the polar cap.

Norway's climatic eccentricities bear an intimate relation to Norwegian agriculture. In Norway farming within the Arctic circle is by no means a desperate enterprise. As the snows retire, vegetation is quickened by long days of sunlight. Even dairy farming prospers within the Arctic circle, despite the accepted notion that only reindeer thrive in these latitudes.

Four fruit-eating bats or flying foxes were intercepted at the port of San Diego recently by the quarantine officials of the State Department of Agriculture. These bats are reported to grow to an immense size, sometimes measuring six feet from tip to tip of wing. Their bodies are coated with reddish brown hair and the head and ears are very much like those of a fox.

While admitting the possibility, Tulare county residents are not, as yet, worried over the announcement that lumbering interests will log off the Redwood canyon stand of Sequoia Gigantea. The tract of more than 4000 acres contains 6,000,000 feet of redwood timber and a contract between the Murphy and McRae interests is announced permitting development of the land in any manner to bring in revenue.

Merger of water service properties in California involving a nominal valuation of around $25,000,000 appeared likely recently when E. C. Elliott, president of the California Water Service Company, confirmed reports that negotiations are under way. California Water Service Company will purchase properties of the Western Utilities Company in Monterey, Coronado, Sweetwater and San Gabriel, valued at $8,000,000, under the plan outlined. With properties of the California Water Service Company listed in the balance sheet of December 31, 1930, at $22,255,000, the State unit of the Federal Water Service Corporation is represented by holdings throughout the State. Its most valuable properties are in Stockton and in Los Angeles county. Fresno properties were sold early this year to the city. Other cities served include Bakersfield, Redding, San Mateo, Marysville, Chico, Oroville, Hermosa Beach, Redondo Beach, Concord, Walnut Creek, Bay Point, Crockett, Livermore, Dixon, Willows, Belvedere, Port Costa, Visalia, Petaluma and Danville.

The restored Mission San Diego de Alcala, fully restored at a cost of $80,000 and true in every detail to the original, was re-dedicated recently in the 162d year of its founding by Father Junipero Serra, with the celebration of the pontifical military high mass in the presence of 15,000 persons.

Los Angeles and its Fiesta, commemorating the city's one hundred and fiftieth birthday, was required to take a back seat recently, when the City Council received a formal invitation from Santa Cruz to attend its one hundred and sixty-second birthday. The Santa Cruzans ask Los Angeles to send a float. The Council referred the invitation to its Finance Committee.

Launching a new fall highway construction program, bids have been opened on two projects representing an expenditure of nearly 150,000. Oswald Brothers of Los Angeles was low bidder at $111,494 for grading and paving four miles in Orange county, between Fullerton and the western county boundary line. A low bid of $34,251 was submitted by the Triangle Rock Company, San Bernardino, for surfacing nine miles of the Redwood highway between Redwood and Willow creeks, Humboldt county.

Warren Stockton, deputy District Attorney, has returned to Bakersfield from Sacramento, having been elected president of the California School Trustees' Association for high and elementary schools at its organization meeting held in the Donner school auditorium. Trustees from counties all over California attended the organization meeting with two Kern county residents being elected as officers of the association. I. E. Porter of Bakersfield is secretary of the organization. Stockton presided over the initial meeting which was fostered by the Kern County Trustees' Association which he also heads.

The California Industrial Accident Commission strives constantly to make it safe for workers using machines in manufacturing plants. Members of the commission have read a safety-first poster used in Japan and declare it "good in any language." Here is the way safety engineers in Japan caution industrial workers to watch their step: Late hours, and the morning accident; even if you feel quite safe, attention once more; long hairs and the short life; stop the machine when cleaning. The machine on motion will bite you any moment; the way to accidents are "looking away" and "idle talks;" one match for smoke is not merely a spark, but the mother of fire; don't throw, don't drop and don't roll. Attention—first to gear, second to belt, third to roller.

Seeing improvement of San Bernardino county's desert routes, the Board of Supervisors have decided to request the State to include five such highways in its next classification for the secondary road system. In addition the new Barton Flat-Big Meadow-Big Bear road, now under construction by the government, and the Carbon Canyon route near Chino are likewise included. The desert highways regarded by the Supervisors as important projects follow: Adelanto-Randsburg highway, a connection with the high Sierras-Nevada region and the various State highways centering in San Bernardino. Parker-Needles-Searchlight road, to provide a connection between Boulder Dam, the Old Trails Highway, the Arrowhead Trail, the Mecca-Blythe road and the Yuma highway. Baker-Shoshone-Death Valley road, to connect with the Nevada State highway system.

With segregation of youthful offenders from hardened convicts considered the best solution of California's crime reform problem, state officials recently ordered full speed ahead in the long delayed selection of a site for the new $1,000,000 penitentiary for juvenile prisoners. Daniel J. O'Brien, director of penology, revealed that a final selection would be made from a list of fifty southern California properties already surveyed. Acting with Director O'Brien in this decision will be Rolland A. Vandegrift, finance director; Colonel Walter R. Garrison, public works director, and Mrs. Rheba Crawford Splivalo, director of social welfare. "Segregation of criminal types is the only practical solution of our prison problem and there will be no further delay in selecting a site and starting construction of a new penitentiary in southern California, which will house offenders between the ages of 18 and 24," Director O'Brien announced. "This new institution will represent an expenditure of a million dollars or more. It is a lot of money, but it will be a good investment. It will pay bountiful dividends to the state each year in rehabilitated young men guided away from careers of crime." California's prison population in Folsom and San Quentin showed a total of 7409 last month, and of this number more than 1600 were between the ages of 20 and 24 years. This group would be eligible for the new juvenile prison, but only those with good records and showing prospects of reform will be transferred, Director O'Brien explained. Sites now under consideration are located in Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Riverside, San Diego and Ventura counties, and these have been offered at from $60 to $300 an acre. It is proposed to purchase at least 1000 acres for the new institution.

Contra Costa county schools have received $380,249.16 from the State school funds, according to word received from Vierling Kersey, Director of Education.

At the annual meeting of the San Fernando Valley Bean Growers' Association the report read by President Hugo A. Carlson showed 174 individual members in the organization. Secretary L. D. Fay reported that more than 90 per cent of the valley acreage was in the association at the closing time for accepting new memberships

Vogue for Light-Top Velvet Gowns

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S fashionable for frocks to go light at the top this season. Many of the smartest models both for daytime and evening wear carry this message. The idea of contrasting a dark dress with a light top is a gesture of the mode which is running the gamut of expression in that designers are playing it up in every key and color.

For sports, school and general about-town frocks the scheme is carried out very simply yet very strikingly. The ensemble which includes a dress with a white or bright yoke and sleeves together with a jacket of the darker material is about as practical and attractive a costume as a woman can wear during the early autumn days.

Just now, owing to the enthusiasm shown for lightweight woolens many of the smartest frocks are fashioned of brown, green, wine-colored or navy sheer wool crepe with yokes, sleeves and trimming touches of novelty wool weaves, perhaps embroidered effects or lacy stripes and plaids, for the new woolens are perfect marvels when it comes to novelty and color combinations.

As to the more formal afternoon and evening gowns there is no end to the charming things which are being done with velvet together with lace and glittering sheer tops. A fashion which is acclaimed as outstanding is the costume which is made of velvet in two or more colors—black velvet with a top of white or bright velvet or perhaps dark brown with an orange velvet yoke and other equally as delectable color combinations.

A stunning example of this type is shown to the right in the picture. This very chic bridge costume (it is also suitable for dining and the theater) is fashioned of black transparent velvet for the lower portion with sheer sand colored velvet for the blouse top. The hat is of black velvet faced with beach-sand grosgrain.

The enthusiasm for velvet used in color combinations is reflected in the newest scarfs which are often made of sheerest possible velvet, in such striking effects as bright green with brown or rust color with navy or black with white as the case may be. A fetching note is the dark velvet dress which has a scarflike arrangement of light-colored velvet, such as a very decorative light green velvet bow with long graceful streamer ends the same posed on one shoulder.

An adorable formal is illustrated to the left. This beautiful black velvet gown sounds the glittering note in its pointed bodice top which is of white chiffon, the same exquisitely embroidered with sequins and pearls. The program of evening fashions is largely a matter of frocks of this type which are enhanced either with lovely lace or intriguing embroidered effects on sheer backgrounds.

SEASON OF HIGH COLOR PROMISED

There is a great deal of color in Paris. The amount of color prevailing in French fashion collections is watched with much interest. Most of it shows the influence of the French Colonial exposition.

The lighting and setting of the exposition is superb, and the reds and browns shown in the Paris fall collections are replicas of the roofs, the cornices and lacquered pillars of the Madagascar and Indo-China buildings and the many shades of white are Tunisian, Moroccan and Martinique in feeling. One of the buildings in its verdigris green certainly has furnished a handsome color motif for French designers.

There are also pastels like the pinks, blues, yellows and greens seen in the fountains at the exposition.

Generally speaking, colors most in evidence in the new style showings emphasize geranium, many browns, from beige to nigger, emerald green, soft greens, considerable red and wine tones, also yellow and orange. There is much black and white. Gray is also in high fashion as it combines with brown or black. Aubergine is a favorite shade, being one of the deep purple casts so highly regarded. Ombre effects in velvet are introduced by Vionnet for gowns and wraps.

Black, brown, gray and blue, also dark green, prevail for street clothes.

Feathers Used to Trim Gowns in Fall Offerings

Fine feathers for fine ladies seem to be the edict of the style world. In addition to the many feather-trimmed hats, Paris is now producing gowns trimmed with coque feathers and ostrich tips.

Ostrich tips are used in the V-neck lines of frocks as a frame for the face, while the coque feathers are used at the hem of short capes and jackets worn in the evening.

Red in All Shades

Red is the most talked-of color for fall. The shades vary all the way from brick to dark carnation, including geranium, magenta and bordeaux. A rich wine red promises to be the most fashionable tint.

Beret of Velvet Ribbon

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

In the early Paris millinery collections felt was in the lead, but later showings are reacting in favor of velvet. Many smart berets are made entirely of velvet ribbon. The model illustrated is a likable fashion for the schoolgirl. The original is in beige and brown, but it would be as effective in any of the new color combinations.

House Jackets Appear in Sports Wear Guise

Bright-colored coats resembling old-fashioned house jackets are a new wrinkle for Paris sports wear. They consist of a short straight piece across the back, reaching just below the shoulder blades and attached to long sleeves. The coats, worn over white sports frocks, are made of bright lightweight wool banded at the wrist in different colors.

Tight Undersleeves in Contrasting Colors

Vestees and tight undersleeves of contrasting light color are smart new notes on early frocks. Black marocain and romain frocks are designed with white crepe de chine lace-trimmed vestees and tight white sleeves reaching to the elbow to meet the flaring black upper sleeve.

HOLDING UP OUR END

If the average citizen who is barely making ends meet or who is falling behind financially, would check himself up, he might find some interesting facts concerning his affairs. He would probably find, among other things, that his difficulties arise principally from his indulgence in the ancient game of trying to outshine his neighbors.

Take our automobile problem for example. First our neighbor buys an inexpensive car, and we must do likewise—on the installment plan. Then before it is paid for another friend invests in a six-cylinder machine, so in order to keep up appearances we must take another plunge—probably going him a little better.

It is the same with other things. We must have a better radio set than the family next door; better furniture; more stylish clothes. We must send our Mary to an expensive boarding school because Mrs. Jones is sending her Sally—when both would be as well or better off in the home town high school. Then we must give expensive parties for which the Browns or Smiths have set the pace. We must have extensive vacation trips, when we might see as fine a collection of billboards right at home. And we wonder why we get hopelessly behind financially.

It is safe to say that at least one-third of the average family's income is spent for such gratification of vanity, beyond what would be necessary to live decently and comfortably. And by reasonable economy a lot of people who can not or do not pay their honest debts might be able to do so, and thereby enjoy a satisfaction equal to that of "keeping up with the Joneses."

The poet-laureate of Peru was given a three-year prison sentence. And probably got off light at that.

Arkansas calls out militia to protect an evangelist. Paul would have liked co-operation like that.

FARADAY CENTENNIAL

This month a ten-day celebration is being held in England in honor of the one hundredth anniversary of Faraday's discovery of magneto-electric induction, which was the origin of the dynamo for the mechanical generation of electricity.

Michael Faraday was born in 1791, the son of an English blacksmith. When he was 10 years old he became a bookbinder's apprentice and read as well as bound many scientific books which passed through his hands.

He later attracted the attention of Sir Humphrey Davy and became his assistant in the laboratory of the Royal Institution. In 1822 Faraday wrote in his notebook: "Convert magnetism into electricity." But it was not until nine years later that he succeeded in doing it—but when he did he laid the foundation for the vast electrical industry of today.

To the pioneer work of Michael Faraday our own great Edison added his genius to remake the world in which we live. While many great scientists, like Davy, Volta, Watt, Ohm, Ampere and others, have contributed much to making electricity the servant of mankind, it is perhaps safe to say that Faraday and Edison will forever remain the greatest names in the history of electrical development.

FIRE LOSS STILL HIGH

During the first half of 1931 the total estimated fire loss was $242,568,267, as compared with $242,299,771 for the same period last year.

The increase is so small as to be almost negligible. But 1930 was a year of high losses, and we are continuing to hold the total to an excessive figure. Carelessness and thoughtlessness, coupled with arson, are still combatting the fine work of those organizations, public and private, which are laboring to instruct the people in the fundamentals of fire prevention.

We have not yet learned, as a people, that it is better to prevent a fire than to extinguish one. We may have the best fire department in the world—but every fire, no matter how slight, results in some waste. We may point out that there are few great conflagrations any more—but a few comparatively small fires can cause a waste of millions, not only in property damage, but in loss of business, employment and higher taxes for other property.

If the last six months of 1931 are like the first six, we will again approach the $500,000,000 mark in destruction by fire. The fire records of past years are a series of black marks against our vaunted American efficiency.

NEW WORLD RECORD FOR SPEED

Setting a new world record for speed, Lieutenant Stainforth of the British Navy a few days ago drove his seaplane 386 miles an hour over a three-kilometer course, beating the previous record by more than 28 miles an hour.

This terrific speed of more than six miles a minute represents the fastest movement of mortal man in the history of the world. When it is remembered that the earth's rotation is only about 15 miles a minute at the equator, it may readily be imagined that some day an airplane will equal that speed. If so, an aviator might fly around the world keeping the sun directly overhead all the time. Or, if he could exceed 15 miles a minute, he might leave the sun behind, so that it would apparently set in the east. Then when he caught up with it again the sun would appear to rise in the west.

This may not happen in our day, but who can say that it is not among the possibilites of the future?

BUY ROADS NOW!

The "buy now" movement is applicable to communities seeking good roads.

Not for many years have material prices been as low as at present. Engineering talent can be obtained at a reasonable figure. And there is a tremendous amount of available labor, both skilled and unskilled.

Road building is one of the best means of alleviating unemployment, as an extremely high percentage of the cost of the completed road goes to labor—a fact the Federal government has already recognized.

By building roads now we not only help thousands of unemployed workers, but make an investment to bring fine returns, from either the economic or social standpoint, in the future.

NOSE RING WEDDING

It may be surprising to many to know that even today among the Kamia Indians the wedding ceremony requires the placing of a ring in the bridegroom's nose, instead of on the bride's finger.

The nose-piercing is itself a ceremonial event, and takes place some time before the wedding, the operation being performed with a wooden needle. Four candidates for matrimony must submit to this ordeal at the same time, after which they must run 15 miles, then remain four days on a restricted diet, while women nearby sing continuously. Following this the youths must go naked for a month, not being allowed to eat deer, jackrabbit or fish. Then they are all set for the wedding.

Perhaps the Kamia bride employs the ring as an aid in holding the spouse's nose to the grindstone, as many of her white sisters do without any such device.

Those who insist on choosing the laws they will obey have an ample supply to select from.

A scientist says the tongue contains more tin than any other part of the body. And naturally rattles more.

BOYS AND THE FARM

Some writers lament the fact that boys are leaving the farms, as though a farm boy had not the same right to choose his vocation in life as other boys. There would be as much logic in asserting that the son of a coal miner, for instance, should not aspire to be anything but a coal miner.

Of course, if a farm boy has no ambition to enter business or a profession, or is not willing to apply himself to learning a skilled trade, he had better stay on the farm. Without education he would be worse off in the town or city than in the country, probably remaining a common laborer. But for the intelligent farm boy who can secure an education, it can not be denied that the cities offer wider opportunities. In fact, many of the leaders in every field of endeavor came originally from the farm.

While most of the trades and professions appear to be overcrowded today, farming is also overdone, as may be seen by the unsatisfactory condition of agriculture. More farm products are raised than can be marketed at a profit over the cost of production.

Whenever the demand exceeds the supply we shall see better prices for agricultural products and we shall also see people going back to the farm. But until that time comes, the farm boy should be encouraged to enter any vocation for which his talents and education are fitting. It may be added that there are even now excellent opportunities right on the farm for boys and others who will study and apply modern agricultural methods. But the future holds little for the indolent and shiftless, on the farm or anywhere else.

THE COST OF CRIME

In its report on "The Cost of Crime" the Wickersham Commission states that America's crime bill is well in excess of $1,207,000,000 a year. The average per capita cost of crime in 300 cities which were surveyed was $5.75. The lowest rate recorded—in Galesburg, Illinois—was 92 cents. The highest—in Jersey City—was $11.30 a year for each citizen. These facts should make the public wonder if the pleasure of passing new "reform" laws is worth what they cost, not only in actual money, but in security, freedom and stable society.

As an economy measure the Commission recommends a weeding out of laws, to eliminate unnecessary and expensive social restrictions. There is nothing new in this, but it is well to bring it once more to public attention. If there is one cause responsible for the prevalence of crime, its cost, and the failure of law enforcement, it is the tremendous bulk of unnecessary laws on our statute books.

The average citizen needs few laws to deter him from murder, housebreaking, kidnapping, blackmail, and other age-old crimes, while a million laws, in themselves, will not stop the criminal from pursuing these same vocations and using a gun or a blackjack or any other murderous weapon, which he will secure, law or no law.

The Nye committee may finally get around to an investigation of the Hayes-Tilden campaign.

About the only ones who have been benefited by the Wickersham reports are the paragraphers.

SIDELIGHTS

A columnist razzes President Hoover for his bad grammar, citing the phrase "—men whom he believed were his devoted friends." Some years ago at a gathering of literary high-brows the question was asked whether any writer of reputation has misused the words "who" and "whom." An authority answered, "Yes, William Shakespeare."

Another glacial period is predicted by Dr. Erdtman of the University of Stockholm, who bases his conclusion on the fact that deciduous forests of the north appear to be diminishing and retreating southward. This possibility need not be unduly disconcerting to the present generation, however, as at least 2,000 years will elapse before the climate of the United States could be seriously affected by the advancing ice cap.

Another scientific invention that may interest bugologists is one that measures the temperatures preferred by cockroaches. It is said that in dry air these odious creatures waste away and die in about four days at a temperature of 86 degrees. Unfortunately this dry air condition seems hard to obtain around the kitchen sink.

Miss Charlotte Hodgskinson, 19 years old, after only an hour and 16 minutes of instruction, took the controls of an airplane and made a solo flight. Which causes Arthur Brisbane to make the sage remark: "Even birds do not learn to fly as quickly as that, although they begin much younger."

A recent remark regarding newspaper advertising is interesting because it was made by a buyer and not a seller of printer's ink. It was made by Oscar Webber, general manager of one of Detroit's biggest stores, who told a Michigan merchants' convention: "When the going is tough our experience shows that nothing sells goods like newspaper advertising."

An American firm recently filled an order for 500 typewriters for the government of Mongolia. The Mongolian language has peculiar characters, different from the Chinese, and it is written from bottom to top of the page and from left to right. The characters represent words or ideas, so no spelling is required, which is a lucky break for Mongolian typists.

From a Japanese boy's essay on Washington: "George Washington was sore because American persons was not free. He say to king, 'I express declaryations of independance.' King he say nothin' doing' and Mr. Washington tell Admiral Dewie to shoot big guns at him. Bimeby king he say he will not run over American persons again. 'Let George do it,' he say, and so today American persons she is free."

Another striking illustration of the operation of the law of supply and demand was noted recently at Longview, Tex., where it is reported crude oil sold for 10 cents a barrel while drinking water brought 10 cents a gallon.

A church in South Bellaire, O., operates a filling station which all members are asked to patronize. This may give some legislator the idea of imposing a special church tax on gasoline. It's taxed for nearly everything else.

Disregarding the fact that legislation in the past has not helped the farmer much, two old ideas, the "equalization fee" and the "debenture" plan, are being dusted off for presentation to the next Congress by professional friends of the farmer.

Harry B. Thayer, retired telephone magnate, made this sage observation at the end of his long business career: "It is easy to fool yourself; more difficult to fool those you work for; still more difficult to fool those you work with, and almost impossible to fool those who work under your direction."

Just how Deputy Sheriff Fowler of Oklahoma learned to drive with one hand is not pertinent to this story. But his ability to do so came handy recently. Driving with one hand and shooting with the other he pursued two bank robbers, killing one and wounding the second, besides recovering the $3,700 they had stolen.

John Kane of Pittsburgh paints box cars for a living and pictures for recreation. One of his pictures won the Carnegie Institute prize at an exhibition in his home city.

Taking names from a census list, officials in Marash, Turkey, summoned Haroun Kaha for jury duty. Haroun happened to be a camel enumerated through error, but his owner presented him in court in accordance with the summons. At that he may have been as intelligent as some jurymen we have met.

The United States is the largest consumer of camphor and imports approximately one-third of the estimated world production.

CLEVER COLT COMING TO TANFORAN TRACK

Of the performers on the flat at Del Monte there is no runner with such a large following as Foolhardy. The audacious colt was shipped early from San Djego to Del Monte to be "pointed" for the feature event for the present meeting, the Del Monte Handicap, to be run next Sunday, October 4.

Foolhardy raced so cleverly against members of the mature division following a hollow victory in the Agua Caliente Midsummer Derby, owner Elmer O'Connell and trainer "Billy" See have determined on sending him out against the good ones from the Eastern tracks at the coming Tanforan meeting. The three year old probably will be nominated for the rich stakes of the Tanforan session, to open Friday, November 6. His outings at Del Monte are part of his preparation for the Tanforan gallops.

O'Connell has the stallion Luminist down at his Bakersfield haras and in addition to Foolhardy will have a band of promising two years olds at Tanforan. Luminist is by imported Hourless from the French mare, Lumineuse, and should turn out something worth while before long. Lumineuse is by the A. K. Macomber stallion Macdonald II, of the noted Hampton line.

Addison Stillwell's Plunging Sun, a winner at Del Monte, will be sent to Tanforan, along with the horses of Henry P. Russell, following the windup at Del Monte. Plunging Sun is more than a fair sort, apparently. He is by Al Jones' well known stallion, Sunshot, which stands at San Ysidro.

The California bred Sun's Sun has shown enough at Hawhtorne and other tracks to make his owner, Al Jones, hopeful of taking down at least part of the money in high class company at Tanforan. Sunshot, his sire, is by the Epsom Derby winner Sunstar, from a Desmond mare. Desmond has often been called the best son of the mighty St. Simon.

With so many government inspectors snooping about, it is quite easy for imposters to pull their stuff. In Nashville, a bandit armed with a fake search warrant gained admission to two homes and stole several thousand dollars.

In her school essay on "Parents," a little girl wrote: "We get our parents at so late an age that it is impossible to change their habits."—Boston Transcript.

Latest census figures show that the world's greatest capitals are London, with 8,202,818 inhabitants, New York, with 6,981,927, Berlin, with 4,332,034, and Paris, with 2,871,429.

ROADS VERSUS DOLES

It is generally believed in America that the only feasible cure for the unemployment problem is to provide jobs—and not doles. The experience of England, riddled with debt largely because of its out-of-work pensions, has not been missed by thinking citizens of this country.

Stimulated public works on the part of the states is being advocated on all sides. Foremost among such activities is the building of roads. In many cases 80 cents of the road dollar goes to labor, which most needs it, and building materials are extremely cheap at the present time.

As a consequence, a number of states are planning intensive road programs for the winter. Few localities have sufficient improved road mileage. We have developed great trunk highways between main centers of population—while, for the most part, five and ten miles away, in the farming areas, roads are subject to the vagaries of weather and the seasons.

It may be that more good feeder roads will be a prime factor in alleviating the need for an American dole. And every dollar we spend on them now will produce many dollars in the form of more efficient transport, easier disposal of farm produce and similar benefits.

SAFETY RULES IN MOUNTAIN DRIVING

Recognizing the need for special care in mountain driving, the law imposes certain regulations on motorists traveling in such localities, according to the Legal Department of the California State Automobile Association. The section of the California Vehicle Act referring to this subject provides substantially as follows:

The driver of a motor vehicle traversing defiles, canyons, or mountain highways shall hold his car under control at all times and as near as reasonably possible to the right hand edge of the road. Upon approaching any curve where the view is obstructed within a distance of two hundred feet along the highway the motorist must give warning of his approach by sounding his horn or other audible device.

Other provisions applicable to mountain driving include one which prohibits coasting upon a down grade with the gears in neutral. Another requires that when two vehicles meet on a grade where there is insufficient room to pass, the descending vehicle must back up to a point where there is sufficient width to permit the ascending driver to pass.

"Lie down and go to sleep again," said the young man. "I'll see if I can't scrouge an overcoat from somewhere. It will get pretty cold in the morning." He went out and locked the door, and returned, this time with a heavy brown overcoat, which he spread gently over Harold's shivering form.

"And there's something else I've got to do, too," he said apologetically, "sorry about it, but I'm obeying orders."

He took hold of Harold's foot, and Harold felt him clasp something smooth and cold about his ankle. A rattling noise on the bed rail informed Harold that not only were his hands now bound, but he was chained by the leg to the bed. Then the young man took his departure, and Harold heard the key turn again in the lock.

Harold could only lie and wonder, as far as his aching head would allow him to do so. As his wits gradually steadied themselves and he became convinced that he was not dreaming, it gradually became apparent to him that most probably the sooner he became active in his own interests the better.

The crushing darkness of the room was a handicap. He could see nothing. And in the darkness the rattle of his own chains, despite his knowledge of its source, was a ghostly and frightening sound. It took about half an hour to work Harold into a state of thorough panic—and his panic is perfectly excusable when it is remembered that not many days ago Harold had been a blameless bank clerk without a stain on his conscience, and it was a severe shock to him to find himself chained hand and foot in a pitch dark room.

Harold's panic first expressed itself in mad strainings at his bonds—strainings which only resulted in bruising his wrists and ankle. Then he writhed and kicked, with even less result. Finally, of course, he began to shout.

At about the fourth shout the door was unlocked and the light came on, and the same young man made his appearance.

"What the devil's the matter now?" he asked, much more crossly than before.

"I want to know where I am," said Harold feverishly.

"Umph!" said the young man. "Is that worth making all this noise about? We've got an invalid downstairs and it wouldn't be pleasant if you were to wake him up. Not—at—all—pleasant."

The last words were uttered with a slow drawl and a narrowing of the eyes which conveyed something horribly sinister to Harold's shrinking soul.

"Who—who are you?" he asked, nevertheless.

"You don't know? Honestly? There! I knew it, and Bauer wouldn't hear of it when I told him. My name's Percy St. Saviour Wright. Don't expect you've heard of me? No, I thought not. And I'm at present in the employ of the Deutsche-Oesterreichistche Erdol Gebief Gesellschaft. That means the German-Austrian Liquid Fuel corporation, if you don't understand German. And downstairs is your host, who is also the distinguished head of the corporation's private information department, Herr Bauer, who is the invalid I told you about."

"But," asked Harold, "but what on earth's all this to do with me?"

He was acutely aware that Wright's hard blue eyes were boring into his like gimlets.

"I see," said Wright. "I see. So you are a little innocent, as I thought. Poor devil! No wonder you're puzzled at all these goings on. Well, the Deutsche-Oesterreichistche Erdol Gebief Gasellschaft is out for some oil concessions in Lesser Avaria. Does that convey anything to you? I thought as much."

The name had wrung a start of recognition from Harold.

"So I suppose you agree, then, that brother Raphael, king of the Huns and Avars, is a bright lot. Yes? He writes interesting letters, doesn't he? That only shows what a blithering fool a man can be when he tries. Any man would be a blithering fool to put that sort of thing down on paper and send it to a woman like Rose Zeiller. But for a king! Especially if you're king of Lesser Avaria, with half your country given you at Versailles and still objecting violently, and a rival dynasty the other side of the Balkans waiting day and night for a chance to step into your shoes. Phew!"

Wright shook his head in utter incomprehension.

"Can you imagine," he went on, "what would happen if those letters ever got into the hands of a newspaper? One of those dirty little Paris papers for instance. In six hours they'd be in the other papers all over Europe. The Muhlbad-Menkhest Zeitung would have a special edition out in record time. It'd be all over the country like a prairie fire. There'd be a revolution before Raphael could get the editors' firing party lined up. Then hey for the Alexandrovitches and bette. government!"

"Yes," said Harold, "I thought it might be something like that, myself. But didn't you say something about a Liquid Fire corporation or something? What—?"

He broke off short at sight of the half-contemptuous pity in Wright's face.

"Good lord!" said Wright. "Haven't you ever heard of the D. O. E. G. G.? Where were you brought up? And you work in a bank, too! My good man, the D. O. E. G. G. is of more account in Europe than Lesser Aviaria itself! The D. O. E. G. G. owns half of everything between the Rhine and the Black sea."

"Yes," said Harold, agreeing hurriedly.

"But," said Wright, and the "but" came in very lamely after his previous panegyric, "but the other half's owned by the other combine—the Frankfurt Kartel. And it was the Frankfurters who got hold of those letters. That was young Kurt Rudolstein who did that—the first bit of business he ever did in his life; it was his father, you know, who organized the kartel. He was in Paris fooling about with Rose Zeiller and she showed him the letters. Kurt got 'em from her for two million francs. That was just when the first rumors were getting round about oil in Lesser Avaria—you know, the new fields outside Lenken. The D. O. E. G. G. was after it, of course. Liquid fuel's their strong suit. But it was too good a chance for the Frankfurters to miss. There's anything up to twenty million profit there. And of course they blackmailed the concession out of poor old Raphael.

"But just before the concession was to be ratified and published, and the letters were on their way to Muhlbad-Menkhest to be handed over in exchange, we got hold of them. We stopped the ratification and were just beginning to put the screw on Raphael when Bauer lost 'em again and you got 'em. Old Raphael's as savage as a bear—Frankfurt and us have about turned his hair gray between us. You'd better hand 'em over and be safe."

Harold was too stupid to make any prompt reply. Wright must have seen the struggle on his face, for he smiled, and only a little grimly.

"But that's what old Bauer will want to talk to you about tomorrow," he said, yawning prodigiously. "And he may find an—argument to persuade you. You'll see what I mean in the morning."

Harold was too muzzy to see anything at present.

"Well," said Wright, "I'm d—d if I sit up any longer telling you stories to keep you quiet. I've got a h—l of a lot of business to do first thing tomorrow. Don't disturb us again, will you? There's a sensible fellow. Good night."

There was something hard in the tone of his voice as he said this last which made Harold decide at once not to make any further noise. He wriggled a little to make himself comfortable, and amazing as it sounds, extraordinary as it may seem, Harold's thoughts rapidly mixed themselves up in a gray comfortable muddle, and he slept the sleep of the utterly weary.

Is It the Unicorn?

Lord Belhaven and Stenton has recently suggested that the unicorn of the Bible may be really the Arabian oryx, or wathaihi, says London Answers.

One oryx, a present from Ibn Saud to the king, was at one time in the zoo. Her favorite delicacy was cigarettes, which she ate with great gusto.

Some Biblical commentators consider that the unicorn, or reem, of the Scriptures, was the animal known as the rimu by the Assyrians, a wild ox of great size, strength and ferocity, very like the extinct aurochs. But neither the oryx nor the aurochs was a unicorn proper, for both had double horns.

This does not rule out either as the Biblical unicorn, however, for the Revised Version reading of "unicorn" is always "wild ox."

Hair Turning White

There appear to be a number of well-authenticated cases on record in which the hair has turned gray within a few hours as the result of sickness, fright, or distress. The case of John M. Driver, clergyman, writer and lecturer, is pointed out as a good example. Driver many times stated from the public platform that his hair turned gray in a single night as the result of a domestic tragedy.

Clara Barton's Great Work

In the Franco-Prussian war Clara Barton assisted in organizing military hospitals. In 1871 she superintended the distribution of relief to the poor in Strasbourg and in 1872 she performed like service in Paris. In the Franco-Prussian war she followed the German armies and was honored by the Gold Cross of Baden and the Iron Cross of Germany.

Canine Temperatures

The normal temperature of dogs is higher than that of people. It is usually about 101 degrees. Young dogs and small ones have slightly higher temperatures than old and large animals.

Explorers by Air Find Ancient Inca Fortress

HOW the ocean in olden times provided the Incas with a natural stronghold for their dwellings is evident in the site of this silent Canete valley village, south of Lima, Peru, atop what was once an island in the sea. Probably, archeologists say, it was a litteral fortress, built as the Pacific's recession turned the island into a coastal promontory. Remnants of a wall that belted the ancient fortification before the Spaniards came are here clearly pictured by the aerial cameras of the Shippee-Johnson expedition which has just returned to New York after nine months of exploration and adventure in Peru.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT HAS A CLOSE CALL

A CLOSE call means a narrow escape. That is what Peter Rabbit had the night he gave the warning that saved some of the geese in the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Peter knew just how much risk he was running when he thumped that warning. He knew that just on the other side of the pond, hiding in the Black Shadows, were Old Man Coyote and Reddy and Old Granny Fox, and he knew, too, that they would be very, very angry because he had spoiled their chances of getting a fat goose for dinner. So the instant Peter had thumped his warning he started for the nearest bramble-tangle. It was a long way off, but it was the nearest safe hiding place he knew of.

Old Man Coyote Was So Close That It Seemed to Peter as If He Could Feel His Hot Breath.

Lipperty-lipperty-lip ran Peter, and as he ran he listened with all his might for sounds of some one following him. "Perhaps," thought Peter, hopefully, "they won't try to catch me tonight."

Now Peter never runs very far at a time without stopping to look and listen. He had run about a third of the way to the bramble-tangle when he stopped and sat up. With his ears standing straight up he listened with all his might. It was very still there in the Green Forest where he was, but back where he had come from he could just hear the gabbling voices of the geese, and so he knew that they had been wakened in time. He knew perfectly well that the wisest thing for him to do was to hurry on, but his curiosity would not let him. Perhaps, after all there was no real danger. He would stay where he was and then if no one followed him perhaps he could slip back to Paddy's Pond and learn just what had happened after he had thumped. He wondered if Honker the Goose knew that it was he, Peter, who had given the alarm.

For some little time Peter sat there listening and heard nothing but the distant sound of the voices of the geese. Then suddenly his heart gave a jump. What was that? He listened harder than ever. As surely as he was sitting there he heard footsteps! They were very, very light footsteps, but they were coming straight toward him. He waited only long enough to make sure and then once more he started for the bramble-tangle, lipperty-lipperty-lip, and this time he didn't intend to stop until he got there. Those light footsteps were made by Old Man Coyote! Peter knew them too well to be mistaken.

It was true. You see the instant Old Man Coyote, hiding there by the pond of Paddy the Beaver, had heard the thumps of Peter he had known that there wasn't the least chance in the world for him to catch one of those geese that night and he had at once made up his mind that if he couldn't dine on a fat goose he would do his best to dine on Peter himself. He knew just as well as Peter did that there was no safe hiding place for Peter nearer than the bramble-tangle and he made up his mind that that was just where Peter would start for. You see Old Man Coyote is very smart. Yes, indeed, Old Man Coyote is very smart. He knows all about Peter and his ways, and he felt quite sure that Peter would do just as he did do—stop to listen to what was going on back there at the pond.

By this time Old Man Coyote was not far behind him and his nose was in Peter's tracks. Now Peter can run very fast for a short distance, but for a long distance Old Man Coyote can run very much faster than Peter. That safe old bramble-tangle was still some distance away when Peter, looking back as he ran, saw Old Man Coyote almost at his heels. The sight of those grinning teeth seemed to give Peter more speed. Never had he run as he ran then. His heart was thumping so that it seemed as if it would burst. His breath was almost gone. The bramble-tangle was only three jumps away, but Old Man Coyote was so close that it seemed to Peter as if he could feel his hot breath. One jump! Two jumps! Three jumps! Peter felt the friendly old brambles brush against him and then there was a sharp pull at his tail. With a little scream of fear Peter pulled with all his might and then—he was safe! He looked back. Just on the edge of the bramble-tangle stood Old Man Coyote and in his mouth was a little bunch of white hairs. Peter looked at his funny little tail. It looked funnier than ever. There was a hole in the middle where the hair had been pulled out.

Scene During Hankow's Great Flood

Dark Corners

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

IF THERE'S a corner in your house
A little dark, you lift the shade;
If there's a corner in your heart
A little dark—well, I'm afraid
You sit and worry, worry thin,
And just won't let the sunshine in.

If there's a corner in your room
A little dark, a lamp you light;
If there's a sorrow in your breast,
I fear you sit there in the night
Among the shadows, in the gloom,
When many lamps might flood the room.

If there's a corner in your house
A little dark, the curtain raise,
If there's a corner in your heart
A little dark, then build a blaze
Upon the ashes that are dead,
Light some new dream, and look ahead.

New German Threat

Germany has developed a new decathlon star who is expected to cause much embarrassment to America's versatile track and field stars in the 1932 Olympic games to be held at Los Angeles, Calif. His name is Kurt Weiss, and he is here seen hurling the discus.

Red, White and Blue

This smart fall ensemble offers a successful combination of red, white and blue. Its distinctive features are the futuristic design on the blouse top and the epaulet cape idea on the jacket that buttons all the way down.

Checked Gingham

A new use for checked ginghams is seen in lunch sets bound with a solid color and blanket stitched around the edges with black. In red and white, green and white and navy and white they are smart.

NOW IS THE TIME

THIS is the season when we begin to look up our cherished recipes to use for canning and pickling. That is, the thrifty housewife does, for often a recipe is mislaid until too late to prepare it.

Cucumber Mustard Pickles.

This is one of the recipes that will be cherished, for the pickles are firm and good up to the last one. Prepare a jar with a gallon of vinegar, a cupful of ground mustard, and half a cupful of salt. Drop the fresh cucumbers, well washed, daily into this pickle until the jar is full. They will be ready to eat in two weeks.

Chili Sauce.

Take twenty-four large ripe tomatoes, seven white onions, two green peppers, five cupfuls of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of salt and one cupful of sugar. Bring the vinegar and sugar to the boiling point, add the other ingredients which have been put through a food chopper and cook one hour at the boiling point.

Tomato Catsup.

Take three dozen ripe totatoes, three red peppers, six onions, all chopped fine. Add two teaspoonfuls each of whole cloves, stick cinnamon and ground mustard. To three cupfuls of vinegar add one and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar and three tablespoonfuls of salt. Cook until smooth, put through a sieve, reheat and bottle.

Cherry Olives.

Cover pitted cherries with vinegar and let stand over night. In the morning drain and ad equal measures of sugar and cherries. Stir until well dissolved before putting away for winter use. The jar should be covered with a cloth and lid, but need not be sealed. These cherries are most delicious to serve with meats, as are the pickled cherries.

Spiced Grapes.

Remove the pulp from six pounds of grapes. Put into a kettle and cook until soft enough to remove the seeds by putting them through a sieve. Put the pulp and skins together, add three pounds of sugar, one pint of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon and one tablespoonful of cloves. Cook two hours. Seal for winter use. This jam is especially good with venison or other game.

SILVER USE GROWS

The low price of silver has stimulated its use in industry. It has, as well, resulted in increased sale of silverware and silver jewelry. The use of silver solders is expanding, and silver is being used in some form in manufacturing airplanes, turbines, radios, electric refrigerators, chemical apparatus and similar products.

While this will not immediately solve the silver problem, or bring the metal back from the depths to a fair value, it all aids in stabilizing markets for the future through new and valuable uses for the metal.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

Five hundred quail sanctuaries by December 1. Although no specific goal has been set in the work of conserving California quail, the above figure has just been given out. The sanctuary idea as a means of replenishing the supply of our state game bird is being developed through the co-operation of ranchers, sportsmen and the Division of Fish and Game. That this method of conserving quail is successful is an assured fact, because several ranchers have maintained small quail sanctuaries on their properties for years and have furnished much important information to the Division.

This work is being developed entirely through volunteer efforts. Volunteer deputies communicate with the various ranchers in the state and get their consent to post certain acreage and prohibit hunting. Surrounding these quail refuges are thousands of acres of hunting land and only the birds that wander out of the protected areas become legitimate game for the nimrods.

Scientific research by experts of the Division of Fish and Game shows that quail multiply readily under protection. Given a suitable section of land where nesting can be carried on unmolested, and with food and water available, the possibilities of extermination are remote for the California quail. On the other hand, without some refuge form of protection, our quail will soon become "a thing of the past," according to scientists.

Much study of quail has been carried on at the state game farms. There will probably be more than 500 sanctuaries by the end of the year, and this figure is given in an effort to be conservative.

Many ranchers are coming to the Division to receive information on the "volunteer system," and in most cases they want refuges established on their land.

California's first game refuge was located in and about Lake Merritt, Alameda county, according to historic records at the Division of Fish and Game.

Even before there were bag limits or seasons on game, the State Legislature was convinced of the necessity of giving waterfowl careful protection on a lake in the city of Oakland. Therefore, in 1869 an act restricting fishing or hunting at this location became a law.

Records show that there are now forty-one game refuges in the state, with a total of 2,500,000 acres. National parks and monuments increase the refuge area by 1,200,000 acres. In selecting the locations of these game refuges the Division has made careful study both of the animal sustaining strength of the land and the pereentage of hunting ground available to the hunter.

Hunters and sportsmen have thousands of dollars invested in equipment and licenses, and great care must be taken so as to allow them a reasonable percentage of huntable ground. The farmer is also greatly considered in this work, and whenever serious crop damage from game animals is reported, scientists are immediately sent into the field to discover practical agencies of relief.

All game refuge work is carried on in co-operation with the United States Forest Service, and the idea in view now is to establish a network of game refuges over the entire state which will create an endless supply of game in the years to come.

Sportsmen throughout the state are aiding the Division in selecting and establishing natural boundary lines. No land is chosen until it has been carefully studied from all angles.

"Sergt." Ahmed," who was decorated for fighting in the World war and since then has supported seven younger brothers and sisters, has revealed that she put on trousers and fought when an elder brother was killed.

Cleveland Thomas became engaged to a long lost sister at Cleveland, but discovered their relationship before the date set for their marriage.

Chinatown in San Francisco has a bank which is operated by Chinese women.

Two baby rabbits, whose mother was killed by a dog, are being raised by a cat at Rockford, Colo.

Some farmers seem to get a measure of relief by cussing the Federal Farm Board.

SAFETY ORGANIZATION SEEKS AID OF JUDGES

An increase of 26 per cent in motor vehicle accidents in the state for the first six months of this year, compared with a similar period last year, has stimulated the California Committee on Public Safety to seek the co-operation of the State Judicial Council to bring about a more even and rigid imposition of penalties in the courts for traffic violators as a means of promoting public safety.

This course was decided upon at the meeting of the executive committee held recently in San Francisco, when reports on the situation were received. It was pointed out by E. Raymond Cato, chief of the State Highway Patrol, that this increase of more than one-fourth in accidents had occurred despite an increase of 33 per cent in the activities of the State Highway Patrol.

Frequent failure in some localities to mete out proper punishment for serious offenses was characterized as one of the elements that break down the morale of enforcement officers and nullify much of their work. Other leading causes of trouble were declared to be the wilful lack of co-operation on the part of motorists, ignorance of traffic laws, and physical shortcomings.

The committee decided to recommend greater severity in examination for drivers' licenses. More rigorous use of the power to suspend or revoke driving licenses will also be recommended.

The Judicial Council is headed by Chief Justice William H. Waste of the State Supreme Court. A special committee of the California Committee on Public Saftey was appointed to confer with him. This committee is composed of Percy E. Towne, chairman of the California Motor Vehicle Council, and Chris Bradley, representing the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco.

Speakers at the gathering declared that automobile accidents in the state constitute a growing menace and the efforts of law enforcement officers to curb them will be futile unless the courts deal firmly with traffic law violators.

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1931 NUMBER 10

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Buy a Rattle

Dealer (rushing into the newspaper office): "See here, you have published an announcement of my death by mistake. That's got to be fixed up somehow."

Editor: "Well, we never contradict anything we have published, but I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll put it in the births column tomorrow and give you a fresh start.

Jones: "I do my 'daily dozen' every day."

Smith: "Well, I don't care so long as I'm not one of the dozen.

When you think of Building, think of H. H.

Small Boy: "Dad, what's a family tie?"

His Father: "Mine. Every time I want it you kids are wearing it."

Voice in the Dark: "Oh, Harold, dear, why did you turn out the light?"

Another: "I wanted to see if my pipe was still lit."

"Whacher lookin' at?" said one.

"That sign," said the other.

"Whazzit say?"

"Ladies Ready to Wear Clothes."

"Oh, hell, they're always ready to wear clothes."

"Sterling," the Wall Board of satisfaction.

"Grewsome"

MacGregor: "Are you the mon who cut ma hair last time?"

Barber: "I don't think so, sir. I've only been here six months."

"Marriage bonds are a good investment," says a clergyman. Unfortunately, however, they are nowadays apt to supply interest for only a few months.

The woman who was asked if she was nervous when requesting money from her husband replied that she was calm—and collected.
